

Deciding With Support

WORKBOOK PRACTITIONER GUIDE

What information should people have about me?

The practitioner guides the person and their supporters to make an informed decision about what information is collected during PBS.

For each decision, the practitioner should consider:

- The decision to be made and how the person can be supported to inform effective PBS?
- What are the key supported decision-making considerations for the person (opportunities for additional supported decision-making) as part of this process?
- What information is needed to help the person make informed decisions?
- What resources/supports are needed to support the person in making this decision?
- What problem-solving and barriers need to be addressed and facilitated?
- How will this decision be documented?

This workbook involves the person in their behaviour support and helps them understand and have choice and control over the information to be collected.

To make an informed decision the person's choices need to be informed by access to relevant information about the benefits and consequences of the decision. The person will make an informed decision about 'What information people should have about me' (i.e., data collection) based on accessible information and discussion provided by the practitioner.

The practitioner can facilitate the decision by:

- ✓ Providing accurate and relevant information about PBS and the implementation of plans.
- ✓ Communication and discussion about how their information (including assessments) and data will be used, why and who it will be shared with and how it will be stored.
- ✓ Offering opportunities to discuss the benefits, potential outcomes, concerns, and any alternative options.

Ensure the person agrees for relevant information and data to be collected, used, and shared.

Make sure the person knows how they can access and amend their information.

What information should people have about me?

Name

Where I live

Phone Number

Date

You have the right to keep your information private.

You do not have to share information that you do not want to share.

This workbook will help you decide what you want to share with your behaviour support team.

You can choose who you want to share information with.

My health and medical history

You might have information that you do not want people in your behaviour support team to know.

You have the right to decide who can have your information.

Do you want your practitioner to know your health and medical information?

You can circle your answer.

Yes

No

Only some information

I need help to decide

Getting to know me

Your behaviour support practitioner will want to know you better.

They might want to know

- What is important to you
- What you find hard
- What you like and do not like
- What you do in your week

Do you want your behaviour support practitioner to have this information about you?

You can circle your answer.

Yes

No

Only some information

I need help to decide

Have a look at the information Lily wants people to have about her.

Information people can have about me

What I like.

What I do not like.

What I find hard.

What I do in the week.

What medicine I take.

Information I do not want people to have

I do not want people to know all my medical information.

Only my mum and sister can have this information.

What information should people have about you?

You can write or draw your answer here.

Information people can have about me

A large, empty white rectangular box for writing or drawing answers related to the 'Information people can have about me' section.

Information I do not want people to have

A large, empty white rectangular box for writing or drawing answers related to the 'Information I do not want people to have' section.